DESERTING NEWSPAPER

Sneaks Away from Offices Under Darkness

By Associated Press Leased Wire Berlin, Sunday, Jan. 12, 6:30 p. m. -The Salician Railway station, the last stronghold of the Spartacan forces, is now in the hands of the government troops.

CAPTURE LEADER

IN BREWING PLANT. By Associated Press Leased Wire London, Jan. 13 .- Karl Radek, one of the leaders of the Russian Bolsheviki emissaries to Berlin, has been arrested, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. The dispatch says the capture was made when the Boetzow brewery was taken by government forces.

SPARTACANS LOST NEWSPAPER OFFICES.

By Associated Press Leased Wire Berlin, Jan. 12, 12:25 p. m .- Determined efforts on the part of the revolutionists to maintain their tenure of the Bourgeoise newspapers came to an inglorious end during Saturday night, when the Spartacans and independent Socialists who had occupied the offices in which the Vossesche Zeitung, the Morganpost and other journals were published began to sneak away over the roof under cover of darkness.

Several followers of Dr. Leibknecht trying to sneak away with Johnson four typewriting machines were intercepted by government defenders, and they told the loyal troops the defenders of the offices were deserting.

The soldiers stormed the office and found it deserted. The garrison of the Tageblatt parlied for a time with the government troops and were then permitted to withdraw with their weapons. Later they were disarmed and arrested by government forces who were cleaning up the inner city. Clean Up Snipers.

Several nests of snipers were cleaned up by the government troops, and one near the Anshald station was found to contain a machine gun with a crew of six men. The gunners were wiped out. The government men are making short work of snipers and even civilians who are found carrying weapons without a government permit are promptly stood up against a wall.

Realize Gravity.

The Spartacans are apparently beginning to realize the gravity of the situation for them; their military leaders are resigning and Eichorn, their police chief, is reported to have fled from police headquarters and taken up quarters in the Boetzow brewery, where at this hour the Spartacans are heavily entrenched.

Five a Week Off By Eli Moffatt Millen.

The "credit man" laughed and drew his heavy chair closer into the circle. He glanced at his watch. "I will just have time to give you one story. Then I must go," he said. "Most of you will remember the character-killing publicity given several years ago to a man by the name of John Goode. He was a defaulter, with my back to her I could feel that you will recall, and he has never explained what became of his rich uncle who disappeared as off the face of

"John Goode had not been with our concern long when the din broke enough however, to become a friend of the treasurer.

"The treasurer of our entire system is a woman."

Two or three of the men started to speak. The "credit man" raised his hand to silence the remarks.

"I know all that," he said. "You think the treasurer of Merrick, Flagg & Co. is a member of this club. So the nominal treasurer is; but the next treasurer is not a woman and see how proudly he will answer in the affirmative. When it comes to actual treasureship he knows not much more about the treasurer's books than I do. At that, he is not letting things go by unnoticed.

"The treasurer of our concern is a woman- and has been for a good

"They say it takes a woman to read the small type on a man's soul. It is also claimed that a man with a lubrimade behave can win more from a woman than a sky-scraper full of outspoken, every-day business men. I have seen times when I thought both views were correct. You will see when I get through which one I believe to-day. "John Goode came along. I have forgotten now in what capacity at first; but he got along. He was a soft bespoken individual, when he did speak. There was an open-faced directness about him. "He stood by the treasurer's desk for half an hour after he had asked for the five. The two got acquainted, and the treasurer, so I was told, smiled when he left her as if she had been honored by the visit.

"After that, for the next two or three months, I frequently saw him chatting pleasantly with the little woman who handled two million and more of the concern's funds each year. "At the door I met Mr. Merrick. "'Miss Susie,' I heard him say, 'Give Mr. Goode a week's salary in advance, if he calls. He asked for a week's vacation tois morning and as loose. "'He is getting farther and farther away while we wait,' I argued. "'He will be back,' declared Miss Susie confidently. 'If he does not, I will take my medicine. Not until.' "The next day things got blacker around the character of John Goode. One of our salesmen, who had just come in, announced that he had seen Goode, the day he started on his vacation, on a train up the State. Goode had said gloomily that he was taking a forced vacation. He was going to the open air and quiet. His wife and children were with him. Not knowing of the bank's desire to see Goode ha

"Two days later, the day before John Goode's vacation was up, the papers found an entirely new story that interested the city. "A rich old bachelor, who had lived alone, was missing. His house was locked up. It was recalled by the for more than a week. They had heard him say that he had only one relative and that relative was a man without a home. The old man had never before gone away.

"Had some mishap befallen him? "In the search for the old fellow, over. A copy of his will was found in his old, drop-lid, walnut desk. "A clause in the will contained the name of John Goode.

"John Goode, according to the clause, was a nephew. He was cut off from participating in the estate. The old man evidently distrusted him.

"'A man,' the clause described eyes were not coquettish. The silver Goode, 'of soft speech and direct appearance of honor before the public, but with a scheming and diabolical lot of the boys-I among the number | the shame of our family to own, He

"The detectives took a trail a week old, but declared that it was still a

"Miss Susie still refused to let me offer our information, which, strange to relate, had not leaked out. "'You are hindering justice! You "That night I broke faith with Miss lusie. I had a talk with one of the etectives, and told him what I knew. Somehow, he did not seem to jump at my revelations. They were only minor details, he seemed to think. His lack of appreciation angered me. I went home disgruntled with myself, and convinced that a detective does not cars for some one else to tell him how to handle a case. After all, I realized, I had not been able to tell where Goode had gone or where he had lived. He had only one huindred and sixty-five dollars of our money. He had thousands of the bank's. "One of the first things I had to do the next morning was to go into Miss Susie's office, on another matter. I did not want to go. I was never more ashamed of myself in my life. I had deliberately ignored her wishes, and accomplished nothing, it seemed. "I must have looked, I imagine, like John Goode would have felt had he been entering instead. "As I finished my business with Miss Susie, she looked me squarely in the eye and smiled sympathetical-"'Don't you worry so much over that Goode affair,' she said. 'I am not worrying. I somehow have a joyous feeling this morning that the fellow will be back at work before noon.' "As she finished speaking the door behind me opened. Miss Susie's face expanded and contracted and flushed with the most amazed expressions I ever beheld on a woman's countenance. Her eyes almost bulged. Before I could turn she clapped her hands once, and with a cry, half of joy, half of unbelief, crose and then sat down again like one exhausted.

"The next instant John Goode stood at the desk, almost by my side. His face was browned, and had a healthier glow than when he left. I sidled around the desk a step or two that I might look into his eyes. I thought could read the bold fellow's story.

"As he glanced up at me with a nod of recognition, as though I emcould, without imagining, see the hollow, uneasy, sleepless look in his second. He leaned over Miss Susie's desk. He held a little scrap of paper in his hand. "'Miss Susie, you must have been absent-minded when you gave me this. Or was it a compliment to what you believe to be my honor? I found

"Miss Susie looked at it, and her face flushed. She glanced quickly through a little file on her desk. "'I must have,' she said- 'must have put in by mistake. I- It is best to keep a little tangible memorandum, you know, Mr. Goode, even though it is not needed. I hadn't missed it. I thought it was here. Why-' "She broke off in confusion. In the confusion she brushed the little scrap off of her desk with her hand. I picked it up for her, stealing a glance as I laid it back on the desk.

"It was a receipt given by Goode for the one hundred and sixty-five dellars. Under his signature he had scribbled hastily:

"'Not more than five a week off.' "'I was confident it was a mistake," Goode was saying, unmindful of Miss Susie's confusion; 'but do you know I could not refrain from hoping that it was intentional-that you trusted me that far?' "At that Miss Susie looked up at] him with a strange light in her eye. For a second she seemed nonplused. Then the corners of her mouth relaxed in a soft smile. "'Out of your own mouth, Mr. Goode, tell me: do you deserve to be trusted that far?' she asked.

"'Yes- and farther, if necessary," he answered steadily. "I stood gaping like a Kentucky mountain boy before the statue of Henry Clay. "Miss Susie took up the scrap of paper and, with the tenderness of a mother when she gives her boy his father's cross of honor because she

QUICK PASSAGE FOR NITRATE

Machinery Had Hardly Been More Than Tested When It Was Called Upon to Do Yeoman Service for the Cause-Witnessed Fewer Unpleasant Incidents Than Any Place Under American Flag.

The Panama canal force is proud of the way the big ditch behaved during the war. It was completed barely in time to play its part in affording quick passage to the nitrate ships carrying their indispensable cargoes from Chili to the United States and Europe, and its machinery had hardly been more than tested before it was called upon to do yeoman service for the cause.

The departure of General Goeffials also put a new governor at the head of the administration in this critical period, but Governor Harding's hand at the helm has been no less successful than was that of his predecessor in making the canal. The period of the war has witnessed fewer incidents here of an unpleasant character than any other place under the American flag. There have been no slides from the sides of the "cut," no strikes or other labor troubles; no sabotage; no interruption to traffic no shortage of supplies; no lack of adequate provision in arranging for all the needs of the Zone. Enemy Plots Frustrated.

Germans were promptly interned and all suspicious characters deported. Precautious against spies were so a subject of comment on all sides. Tons of German propaganda were inionary movement against Costa Rica, engineered by political exiles here, was promptly squeiched,

A volunteer news service was organized by canal employees and a counter-campaign against German propaganda was carried on all over Latin-America, which has had good results in the attitude of many of the governments in South and Central America.

More than 10 per cent of the canal employees went to the war. Those remaining worked overtime in every department. The Zonites gave $90,000 a year to the Red Cross; subscribed loans and never once complained about high prices or grumbled over conditions imposed by the war. None of them showed alarm over the submarine menace.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their northe home of Mrs. Carrie Cook Tues- mal activity. neys active. Drink lots of water-you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

This is true also of public building legislation. However, there will not be much of of Col. Roosevelt.

It was 9 o'clock in the morning before official Washington learned of the death of the former President. And official Washington was shocked. Government business for the time being stood still.

Death eliminated Roosevelt from the Presidential race in 1920. It was almost decided, and believed by the Republican leaders throughout the country that Roosevelt would be the standard bearer of the party. Now that the Creator of us all took such a prominent part in shaping the 1920 campaign, quite a few of the leaders have turned their attention to other men. There is considerable talk down here concerning Governor Frank O. Lowden for the presidency. Where could the party select a better candidate? Rumor had it in Washington among leaders that Lowden would have made a splendid running mate with Roosevelt, but now since the Colonel has passed away, Lowden has jumped one pace.

Leaders here feel that Governor Lowden has every qualification for President. He has the necessary wealth, if wealth counts for anything. And who can say it does not? He has the executive ability. He has diplomacy. He has that faculty, and few men possess it, of selecting good men about him. What a wonderful cabinet Governor Lowden would select. Naturally, he would have a fertile field to select men from, but even with such fertile field, big men have fallen down.

Governor Lowden would not desire to be the whole thing at the head of the government. He is a man who realizes that other men, and especially men at the head of departments, should have something to say. He would extend to them that right.

But Governor Lowden must have have organization. He must see to it now that organization is gotten in form. Delay is sometimes dangerous. Presidential candidates are not made. in a month. It takes years. And then the right men must get back of the movement.

The commonwealth of Illinois has a splendid opportunity to give from her brainy men the man who will be the next occupant of the White House. Let her not fail. There must be harmony throughout the state. Governor Lowden has one other advantage. He is known, and well known, throughout the great east. His four years in Congress better fitted him for the presidency. There he met the leaders of the na-

Will Illinois grasp the situation and make its great governor, Presi-

Other men talked of and prominently so, are General Wood, General Pershing, Hiram Johnson, from the Pacific coast and Senator Harding of Ohio. All are good men. General Wood was a very close friend of Colonel Roosevelt. The former, could he not get the place himself, would have done all in his power to make General Wood president.

General Pershing, it is said, would make a good candidate. It is quite well known that the general is a Republican. But he is a military man. Of course, General Wood is a military man, and he has been given credit for being the most thorough military man in the whole country. Senators Harding of Ohio and Hiram Johnson of California are both powers in the senate. They are leaders, not only in their respective states, but throughout the entire country. All of the men mentioned have national reputations, Pershing, of course, has an international reputation, but international reputations do not have much to do with making a man president of the United States.

But within the next two years the people must select their president. Both great parties must put forth a strong man. One of the two great parties will elect its candidate.

But, as "Uncle" Joe Cannon would say, "In the final analysis" would not Governor Frank O. Lowden have as good a chance as the others whose hats are ready to be thrown into the ring? Better keep the governor in mind.

WAR ON THE RED PLAGUE

- A nation-wide Fight on the enemy within our gates. Surgeon General Rupert Blue the Leader

The Government of the United States has declared war on the diseases

Says Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the United States Public Health

"The compulsory medical examination of the millions of men summoned for war informed us fully as to the prevalence of venereal diseases throughout the country and opened the eyes of the nation to the gravity

According to an estimate made by the Surgeon General of the Army, no less than five-sixths of all the venereal disease afflicting men in our military service had been brought in from civil life. As the facts became known, the fight for cleaning up the nation developed. Early in the war the work of protecting our men in the military service from venereal diseases had been in the hands of the Council of National Defense and the Commission on Training Camp Activities. Later Congress, an amendment to the Military Appropriations Bill, created within the Public Health Service a Division of Venereal Diseases and Assistant Surgeon General C. C. Pierce was placed in charge.

It may at first seem foolish that, under our stress, we returned to the house at all; for, as each now had a pass, we might have driven straight to the barrier and out into the country. But the return was more or less necessary. Beside that there would be little danger from Melton within the next two hours, if Clinton kept his Champe's papers, and the girl for divers things a woman needs. She could not escape in the flimsy thing she then were, for the sky had become overcast, the air chilly, and a storm was threatening.

It is from and stable. In each corner of the room ed a man. He is persecuting me; he purposes, a mirror in every panel as was but one entrance, a heavy oak door opening into the main hall.

When I went downstairs we had been in the house for nearly an hour, and I was wondering why Agnes delayed joining me, when I heard her coming. She had changed her dress to some thick woolen stuff; a close hood had taken the place of her gay hat, and in her hand was a well-filled

I knew what had happened, I dropped the portmanteau I had taken from the girl, who now sprang toward the hall door as if to close it; but ere she got half-way across the floor she found herself face to face with her disyou hold him, Sir Henry? > With that my own sense forsook me. I forgot my assumed character, my danger; and all else; and with something like a roar I jumped from my chair and sprang at the man, the act loosening my sword and sending it clattering to the floor. For an instant I was a madman. I grappled the unsuspicious coward and threw him to the floor with a force that half stunned him; then, with my knee on his chest, I held him by the throat with one hand while I tried to reach the rapier, which had fallen a little beyond my reach,

It was then that the officer, who was standing by the door, caught the situation, it probably clearing as the bonnet I wore fell from my head, and my disarranged disguise uncovered my boots and breeches. He had uttered a low exclamation when his superior had struck Agnes; but now he whipped out his sword, let go a round oath, and came for me. It was against him that I wished to use my weapon.

But he never reached me. Before he had passed around the table in the center of the room, Agnes had come to life, stooped for my rapier, and drew it, casting away its sheath. And she met the man with a sharp crossing of his blade that so astonished him that he leaped backward. Stand aside, madam, or I shall be obliged to hurt you," he said. "I cannot fight a woman!"

"You will fight me, sir," said Agnes, "and you will find me worthy. Look to yourself! See! I am a traitress-I am a spy! Yonder is Captain Dressler! Make the most of your knowledge! Quick, sir!"

She engaged with him at once, and It would have gone hard with the man had he not put the table between them, though, as if ashamed of himself for seeking an entrenchment, he came out to the open and met her fairly. And so the two fenced, the officer trying to sidle toward the door, but not taking his eye from the animated face of the girl, who was now again color and life. It was plain that he was strictly on the defense.

De Castro

It was Tong Sue who first discovered gold at Cape De Castro. Tong was prowling up the coast toward Port Darwin, and the strip of white sand that ran like a lace insertion between the emerald waters and the stunted mangroves attracted him, Tong went ashore, washed a few buckets of the sand, and then pulled his boat up on the beach. The find was exceptionally rich. It is a peculiar fact that a discovery of gold, no matter how jealously the discoverer guards the secret, is carried in some unexplainable way to men miles away from the find. This has been proved a thousand times. It would seem that the very intensity with which the man on the spot prays that all others will keep away, has an effect that is diametrically opposite. Men suddenly feel a desire to take the trail that leads to the new Golconda, although that trail may have appeared hopeless only a few days previous, and they explain their arrival at the field saying that "something" dragged them in that direc-

This mysterious "something" disturbed Tong Sue's solitude five days after he landed at Cape De Castro. A Jaranese and a white man arrived from different points of the sunburned plain, and they made straight for the beach and pegged out claims. The Chinaman didn't speak. The old maxim which tells us that silence is golden was translated from the Chinese. Next day another Jap drifted in from the gray northwest, and the following day brought another. Tong viewed the newcomers with impass sive eves, but he gave no welcomes, He washed industriously from early morn till the tropical twilight was smothered in the heavy night, and the little bag that hung round his neck grew heavier as the days passed.

Tone's silence welded the friendship that immediately sprang up between the four newcomers. They hated Tong and they liked each other through knowing the common hate. They compared notes, talked and smoked together in the evenings and cursed the Chinaman every little while. But the hostile looks and the curses did not affect Tong. He dreamed rosy dreams of a maiden who lived far to the north in evil-smelling Hankow, and he twirled his dish merrily.

It was unlucky for the Chinaman that the new arrivals were not as fortunate as himself. His days had been exceptionally profitable, but he soon realized that his claim was the exception. He didn't question his The old-time mixture of Sage Tea discovered it by that peculiar power and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grand- of intuition possessed by men who rely upon their eyes to collect information that is never whispered loud enough for their ears to hear.

On the fifth night after the arrival of the first strangers Tong was made still further cognizant of the envy of the four. His sleep was disturbed by a slight sound, and by amazing quickness he managed to twist his body in that intervened between the happenone small strand at a time; by morning centrated thought and the bandaging Cape De Castro too warm for the original pioneer. Tong had no wish to evacuate hurriedly. He was an aggressive person if judged by Celestial standards, and each day's labor was making the little bag heavier. By daylight he had made up his mind to match his cunning against their strength.

That evening he crept into the bush towards a buffalo wallow a mile inland, and there performed the unpleasant work of bagging a portion of the careas of a bull buffalo that had become bogged in the sticky mud some three weeks previous. The task was not agreeable, but Tong worked with much determination. The vision of the maiden in Hankow came up before his eyes and made him forget much. He dragged his load by a circuitous track to his boat that he had secreted in the mangroves, and then oright, alert—a good, clear skin and paddled out into the little bay shelnatural, rosy, healthy complexior | tered behind the long snaky strip of assured only by pure blood. Quite satisfied with his work, he lit his pipe and made a comfortable couch for himself in the bottom of the boat.

The four on shore missed Tong early that evening. One of their number had wasted a considerable amount of time and patience in crawling silently to the spot where the Chinaman usually slept, and was much disgusted at finding that Tong Sue had changed quarters. His companions were also disgusted when he made his report. They made an extensive search of the beach, and towards midnight the moon, that peeped for an iustant from behind the black clouds, enabled them to locate the boat in the middle of the little bay. The four felt aggrieved. They looked upon the Chinaman's action as a personal insult. He had insinuated by his action that their company was not desirable, and they acted quickly to avenge the indignity. They dream lots between themselves, and five minutes afterwards two of the Japa placed their knives between their teeth, stepped out of their scaniv clothing and waded into the warm water of the bay. The white man and the other Jap sat themselves down on the sand and waited.

An hour passed and the two who had swam out to expostulate with Tong had not returned. Three hours went by, yet no sounds came from the water. At last the white man, cursing softly, moved up the beach. The Jap followed slowly. It was plain to both that the gods had not been kind to the two swimmers.

Tong Sue did not come ashore next morning. He had examined the beach very early, and seeing only two of his visitors moving about he thought it advisable to stay on the water and rest. The Jap and the white man also rested.

They sat on the beach and watched the little boat, punctuating long silences with strange curses. They wondered how Tong had disposed of their two friends. There were no firearms at Cape De Castro, and one has to be quick with a knife to deal with two visitors who make a surprise call. Sometimes the two on the beach wondered what was in the bag that Tong Sue had suspended from the stern of his boat.

"He will be sleepy tonight," remarked the white man, as the sun dipped towards the mangrove trees. The Jap nodded and sharpened his knife on a smooth pebble. "We'll get him sure," continued the white, and the other bared his yellow teeth in a smile of approval.

"Gottem good," he snapped. "They two fools last night. Never mind, much more for us." He thought of the Chinaman's gold and stroked his chife curningly.

They relapsed into silence, sitting side by side till the thick night swept down from Asia and blotted out the little boat.

Tong Sue overslept himself the following morning. The sun was shining upon a deserted beach when he looked shorewards. He searched the shore line patiently, but no one was visible. Then he glanced cunningly at the suspended bag of offal and the blue water beneath.

"Gottem all four!" he laughed softly. "Plentee good smell, plentee good shark. Dam fool not know!"

He tripped lightly to the stern and started to unfasten the rope that bound the end of the pole to the seat. Tong Sue's thoughts were far away at that moment. The little maiden at Hankow came up before his eyes, and he fingered the rope with clumsy fin-

But it was a bad moment for day dreams. As Tong stepped across the jerked up by the weight hanging upon the other extremity, and the Celestial was thrown into the water.

A big "gray nurse" shark that had shepherded the buffalo meat for the preceeding thirty-six hours, snapped the bag before it touched the surface of the water. Her traveling companion, a medium-sized "bull-nose," attended to Tong Sue, and peace settled down upon the white beach of Cape De Castro.

HIS WIFE WIRED.

"You'd better wire when you get there, so I will know that everything is all right," said Higgins, as he kissed his wife and three children good-by on the car in which they were to journey to the vacation resort at which they were to remain six weeks. The next morning he received the desired "wire." It read as follows:

"Dear Tom -We arrived here safely after a hot and tiresome ride. Tommy got dreadfully carsick, and Mazie had a sick headache most of the way, and I had my hands full taking care of them. Then the baby got tired and bot and fretted a great deal, so it was rather a hard journey for all of us. They didn't put on any dining car until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and we nearly starved. Then, when they did put on the diner, it was nearly an hour before I could get a table for all four of us. The food was the poorest I ever ate in a dining car and the prices were the highest. "I heard one man say that he thought it was a regular case of graft. But we are here now and have quite pleasant rooms, although they are not on the beach or water side of the house. But, then, we will be in our rooms so little that it does not make very much difference where our rooms are. Be sure and come down Friday and stay over Sunday, and don't forget what I told you about watering my plants and seeing to it that the house is locked carefully every time you leave it. You are so careless about such things. Now I must get the children to bed, and they should have been in bed before this. but I wanted to wire you as you suggested, and now I have done so. Lov-MARY."

'Nine dollars and eighty cents to pay on it," said the messenger boy, as he handed Higgins the book for his "Geewhillikins! Next time I tell a woman to 'wire' me anything," said Higgins. "But what if it had been a cablegram? It would have been bankruptcy for me!"-Judge.

In addition to all these guests, 25,000 little children were cared for in the nursery and the rest room served 70,000 tired wives and mothers.

The workers at the information desk received and answered 97,000 questions varying from how to get the best connections to a destination clear across the continent, the rates of soldiers' insurance and the kind of cretonne a girl bride should have in her living room now that Private John is coming home from France. Eleven thousand of these queries required telephone conversations with various company commanders relative to hunting up a soldier whose parents had arrived unexpectedly.

When American Destroyers Started Out to Convoy Merchant Ships and Transports They Knew Just Where to Look for Enemy U-Boats-Destroyer Crews Have Earned the Rest They Are Now Getting.

When American destroyers during the last 18 months of the war steamed out of Queenstown to convoy merchant ships and transports through the submarine-infested area of the North Atlantic, they went with accurate information of the whereabouts of the enemy U-boats as supplied by the British admiralty.

As a destroyer flotilla moved out to sen the commodore would be bending over his maps with his navigators. On the maps were little rings, sometimes many and sometimes only a few, each denoting where a German submarine was known to be. The maps also had a cross mark showing where the flo tilla was to meet the convoy.

"How do you know a submarine is about in that locality?" a destroyer captain was asked as he examined his

"Well, we know, and pretty definitely," came the reply with a smile. "The U-boat 76 is about here (pointing to a ring). She has been there three days operating within a radius of about 80 miles and will return to her base in four more days if some of us don't get

Earlier Hatches and More Winter Eggs

THERE is a very slight margin between success and failure in poultry raising. The farmer who makes a success of poultry keeps his eye trained on two things-earlier hatches and more winter eggs. He is the farmer who makes poultry produce and produce profits big profits for him.

The first essential is a substantial, air tight, warm, well ventilated Poultry House.

A warm house means earlier hatches and more winter eggs-A sanitary house means healthier flocks and less disease-A convenient house means better care and attention-A well constructed poultry house adds value to your farm.

The best poultry house is covered on the outside with WHITE PINE. The wood is light, durable and so easily worked that you'll enjoy building with it. And it does not warp or twist or split or rot even after years of exposure.

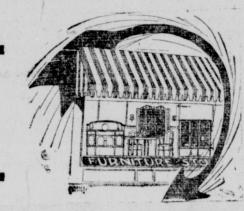

Our service makes building easy and inexpensive. We have plans, specifications and bill of materials for the Poultry House illustrated or for any other type of poultry houses if you prefer. Industrial Woman's Service Club Brings Home to Girls in New Factory Community.

BLUE TRIANGLE MEANS CHEER

Club Stands for Hot Lunches, Clean Towels, Comfortable Cots, Parties, Games and Recreation to Girl Workers.

Katherine Holland Brown.

Y name is May Isabel Carnahan. I am eighteen years old, and I work in a big factory in Michigan. More than four hundred other girls work there too. Change of Attitude Is Now Quite I don't aim to tell you about our jobs. You can read about our work in the labor department reports. But I do aim to tell you about our Big Sister and of the things she has done for us.

"To begin with, our factory town isn't a town at all. It's a huge barn of buildings stuck down in the country nineteen miles from nowhere. There is a railroad slding, a station the size of a dry goods box, seven farmhouses and one general store and postoffice combined-it's pretty near as big as a hot tamale stand. And that's all. No ice-cream parlors, not one solitary movie show, in all those nineteen miles. Lonesome? It's the ragged edge of desolation, that's what it is.

"I was one of the first carload of forty girls that was shipped up from Chicago. The factory was swarming with workmen putting in the machinery, and we girls couldn't begin work for a day or so, so we began hunting trifle that the employment folks hadn't ing and eating in the cars that had brought them there, backed on the siding. Our only chance for beds and food was with those seven farmhouses, so we marched straight to the farmers' wives and asked for board and room.

Farmers' Wives Hospitable. "I will say that those women were kind and hospitable. They fixed it up between them to feed us forty girls, and they gave us good food too. But for rooms, that was the question. They could each spare one room. That meant sleep five or six in a room. But right then along came the boss of the factory and told us the machinery was ready and he'd expect us girls to work double shifts, night and day.

"He wanted to make use of every minute, you see. But that gave us our chance as to sleeping. We fixed it up with the farm folks that we'd work double shifts and sleep double shifts

"So we planned it. Three girls would use a room from eight at night three girls who'd been working all cases that most of us went without. And towels were scarce as diamonds well, the general store kept yellow bar on food, and for a week it was potatoes and beans and mighty few Along Came a Miracle. "But, right when we were about ready to quit our jobs and beat it for home, along came a miracle. Two quiet, businesslike women climbed down from the eastbound train one morning. With them came eight workmen, a carload of scantling and tar paper, another carload of cots and blankets and pillows and sheets and towels-brand new blankets and beds -think of the glory of that !- and bushels of dishes and rolls of ollcloth and enough burlap to carpet the coun-You won't believe me when I tell you that in ten days their workmen had a scantling-and-tar-paper shack put up and burlap tacked over the and her helper had set up board tables and coffee kettles and were serving us the grandest hot lunches every day. were set those rows of clean cots, with enough cover to keep you warm the think you'd know that without being have spent a large sum of money durtold. All over the country wherever ing the last nine months in an atwe girls have pitched in to make aeroplane cloth or overalls or munitions or canned goods you'll find a Y. W. C. A. secretary working harder than anybody else to make the girls comfortable and to keep them happy and well. Sometimes they haven't money enough to get all that we really need. But always they stretch every cent to make it do its level best for us. Do you wonder that we girl workers have learned to call the Y. W. C. A. our Big Sister -the very best Big Sister of all?

INVENTS "VICTORY GAS"

Cleveland Man Claims to Have Substitute for Gasoline.

A substitute for gasoline to be called "Victory gas" has been invented by Joseph Black, formerly of Spokane, Wash., but now living in Cleveland, O. The new fuel is being prepared for demonstration there in a large cleaning establishment, where the gas will be distilled and used to drive automobiles about the city in an attempt to show its superiority over gasoline or other fuels for internal combustion engines that it will, as claimed for it, cost less and will produce more power. The gas is said to be odorless and will not carbonize.

That Joe Povlick's chickens are well acquainted with their owner's train whistle is evidenced by the way they run for the track whenever Joe. road and lives near the track at Lakeside, O. Whenever Joe drops off the men were being killed every day and | train they are there to meet him and, hundreds of thousands were exposing in their chickenly glee, fly to his shoul-

> To Make Ohio "Fireproof." "Ohio is going into a war winter as near fire and disease proof as human agency can devise," said State Fire Marshal T. Alfred Fleming. "Thousands of letters were sent out from the office calling attention to November 2 as Fire Accident Prevention day. "Responses fairly swamped the office force. From schools, business organ izations, municipal authorities, ministerial associations and wholesale and retail associations of all kinds came requests for fire prevention literature "On the Sunday prior to November

2 sermons on fire and accident prevention were preached in every mu-LIVERY-WE CALL FOR YOUR nicipality in Ohio."
